Nature not only had been painting there; but with the fragrance of a thousand scents was making up a blend unknown on earth. What I find most troubling about the term "unconditional" is that it is most often associated with the term "surrender" which in turn is most often associated with "losing" as opposed to winning. Which is why I advocate the use of the term "abiding love" As in the hymn "Abide With Me" which is to say we are loved equally whether our behavior or the situation is "good" or "bad", perhaps loved even more so in the latter. A friend of my daughter is of the mind that "unconditional love: implies that there is such a thing as "conditional love", i.
